Resilience Circles Poetry
Compiled by Gary Horvitz and Catherine Sutton Albany, Ca.
February, 2012

(an open source document)
Father Earth

There’s a two-million year old man no one knows.
They cut into his rivers, peeled wide pieces of hide from his legs, left scorch marks on his buttocks. He did not cry out.
No matter what they did, he held firm.
Now he raises his stabbed hands and whispers that we can heal him yet.
We begin the bandages, the rolls of gauze, the unguents, the gut, the needle, the grafts.

We slowly, carefully, turn his body face up,
and under him,
his lifelong lover, the old woman, is perfect and unmarked.
He has lain upon his two-million year old woman all this time, protecting her with his old back, his old scarred back.
And the soil beneath her is black with their tears.

Clarissa Pinkola Estes

Wild Geese

You do not have to be good.
You do not have to walk on your knees
For a hundred miles through the desert, repenting.
You only have to let the soft animal of your body love what it loves.
Tell me about despair, yours, and I will tell you mine.
Meanwhile the world goes on.
Meanwhile the sun and the clear pebbles of the rain are moving across the landscapes, over the prairies and the deep trees, the mountains and the rivers.
Meanwhile the wild geese, high in the clean blue air, are heading home again.
Whoever you are, no matter how lonely, the world offers itself to your imagination, calls to you like the wild geese, harsh and exciting -- over and over announcing your place in the family of things.

~ Mary Oliver ~
Arms Full

Gratitude means showing up on life’s doorstep, love’s threshold, dressed in a clown suit, rubber-nosed, gunboat shoes flapping.
Gratitude shows up with arms full of wildflowers, reciting McKuen or the worst of Neruda.

To talk of gratitude is to be the fool in a cynic’s world.
Gratitude is pride’s nightmare, the admission of humility before something given without expectation or attachment.

Gratitude tears open the shirt of self importance, scatters buttons across the polished floors of feigned indifference, ignores the obvious and laughs out loud.

Even more, gratitude bears her breasts, rips open her ribs to show the naked heart, the holy heart.
What if that sacred heart is not, after all, about sacrifice?
Imagine it is about joy, barefoot and foolhardy, something unasked for, something unearned.

What if the beat we hear, when we are finally quiet is simply this:
Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

- Rebecca del Rio

Part Two, Sonnet XXIX

Quiet friend who has come so far, feel how your breathing makes more space around you.

Let this darkness be a bell tower and you the bell.
As you ring, what batters you becomes your strength.

Move back and forth into the change.
What is it like, such intensity of pain?

If the drink is bitter, turn yourself to wine.
In this uncontainable night, be the mystery at the crossroads of your senses, the meaning discovered there.

And if the world has ceased to hear you, say to the silent Earth: I flow.
To the rushing water, speak: I am.

Rainer Maria Rilke, Sonnets to Orpheus, XII
Thank You

Listen
with the night falling we are saying thank you we are stopping on the bridge to bow from the railings we are running out of the glass rooms with our mouths full of food to look at the sky and say thank you we are standing by the water looking out in different directions back from a series of hospitals back from a mugging after funerals we are saying thank you after the news of the dead whether or not we knew them we are saying
thank you in a culture up to its chin in shame living in the stench it has chosen we are saying thank you over telephones we are saying thank you in doorways and in the backs of cars and in elevators remembering wars and the police at the back door and the beatings on stairs we are saying thank you in the banks that use us we are saying thank you with the crooks in office with the rich and fashionable unchanged we go on saying thank you thank you with the animals dying around us our lost feelings we are saying thank you with the forests falling faster than the minutes of our lives we are saying thank you with the words going out like cells of a brain with the cities growing over us like the earth we are saying thank you faster and faster with nobody listening we are saying thank you we are saying thank you and waving dark though it is

Wild Mercy

The eyes of the future are looking back at us and they are praying for us to see beyond our own time.
They are kneeling with hands clasped that we might act with restraint, that we might leave room for the life that is destined to come.
To protect what is wild is to protect what is gentle.
Perhaps the wilderness we fear is the Pause between our own heartbeats, The silent space that says we live only by grace.
Wilderness lives by this Same grace.
Wild mercy is in our hands

Terry Tempest Williams

An Affirming Flame

Defenseless under the night
Our world in stupor lies;
Yet, dotted everywhere,
Ironic points of light Flash out wherever the Just Exchange their messages:
May I, composed like them
Of Eros and of dust, Beleaguered by the same Negation and despair,
Show an affirming flame.

W.H. Auden
THERE IS A POEM

There is a poem in our Gratitude in the Ancestry that is our Future in the Presence that fruits our past and our passing

There is Gratitude in our steps that find us standing still, while our sitting down finds us standing up

There is a poem in the Honoring of our Grief in the pain from which we are no longer polarized in our cradle that no longer clutches for a calm, in a torrent where we find tenderness for tears so salty they stream from the sea

In the Honoring of our Grief we give as we receive eyeing our way to the center of the storm and we do not hide and we do not seek the Stillness of this Movement

There is a poem in our Seeing With New Eyes where our Gaian vocabulary loves composite words Looking touching Smelling hearing tasting exists as a synesthetic prefix to inhalexhale and a verb for Living

There is poem in our infinite dictionary that breathes a poetry of symbiotic survival

There is poem in our Going Forth in our groundedness that dances in our soaring that roots us in our knitting that re-weaves the web

There is a poem in all of us in our Work that Reconnects

Bronwyn Preece
hymn to the sacred body of the universe

Let's meet at the confluence
where you flow into me
and one breath
swirls between our lungs

let's meet at the confluence
where you flow into me
and one breath
swirls between our lungs
for one instant
to dwell in the presence of the galaxies
for one instant
to live in the truth of the heart the poet says this entire traveling cosmos is “the secret One slowly growing a body”

Two eagles are mating – classing each other’s claws and turning cartwheels in the sky grasses are blooming grandfathers dying consciousness blinking on and off all of this is happening at once all of this, vibrating into existence out of nothingness every particle foaming into existence transcribing the ineffable arising and passing away
arising and passing away 23 trillion times per second – when Buddha saw that he smiled

16 million tons of rain are falling every second on the planet an ocean perpetually falling and every drop is your body every motion, every feather, every thought is your body time is your body and the infinite curled inside like invisible rainbows folded into light every word of every tongue is love telling a story to her own ears let our lives be incense burning like hymns to the sacred body of the universe

my religion is rain my religion is stone my religion reveals itself to me in sweaty epiphanies every leaf, every river, every animal, your body every creature trapped in the gears of corporate nightmares every species made extinct was once your body

10 million people are dreaming that they’re flying junipers and violets are blossoming stars exploding and being born God is having déjà vu
I am one Elaborate crush
we cry petals as the void is singing

you are the dark that holds the stars in intimate distance that spun the whirling whirling, world into existence

let’s meet at the confluence
where you flow into me
and one breath
swirls between our lungs

Drew Dellinger
Tilicho Lake

David Whyte

In this high place it is as simple as this, leave everything you know behind.

Step toward the cold surface, say the old prayer of rough love and open both arms.

Those who come with empty hands will stare into the lake astonished, there, in the cold light reflecting pure snow, the true shape of your own face.

God speaks to each of us as he makes us, then walks with us silently out of the night.

These are the words we dimly hear:
You, sent out beyond your recall,
Go to the limits of your longing.
Embody me.

Flare up like flame
And make big shadows I can move in.

Let everything happen to you:
beauty and terror.
Just keep going.
No feeling is final.
Don’t let yourself lose me.

Nearby is the country they call life.
You will know it by its seriousness.

Give me your hand.

Rainer Maria Rilke

Riotous Meadow People

Tom Atlee

We’re a meadow, not a highway, a process, not a plan.
The space we make helps people take their futures in their hands to sow the world with selves and dreams to blossom once again.

It’s not a single dream we sow, not even garden rows—the meadow reaches everywhere and riotously grows, a passionate diversity no one designer chose.

Our meadow happens naturally, it fills a space left bare.
Yet still we must protect it, admire it and care enough about tomorrow to have a meadow there.

I think I could turn and live with animals, they are so placid and self-contain’d,
I stand and look at them long and long.

They do not sweat and whine about their condition,
They do not lie awake in the dark and weep for their sins,
They do not make me sick discussing their duty to God,
Not one is dissatisfied, not one is demented with the mania of owning things,
Not one kneels to another, nor to his kind that lived thousands of years ago,
Not one is respectable or unhappy over the whole earth.

~ Walt Whitman ~ (Song of Myself, #32)
It Is I Who Must Begin

It is I who must begin.
Once I begin, once I try -- here and now, right where I am,
not excusing myself
by saying things would be easier elsewhere, without grand speeches and ostentatious gestures, but all the more persistently
-- to live in harmony with the "voice of Being," as I understand it within myself
-- as soon as I begin that, I suddenly discover,
to my surprise, that I am neither the only one, or the first,
or the most important one to have set out upon that road.

Whether all is really lost or not depends entirely on whether or not I am lost.

~ Vaclav Havel ~

When the Shoe Fits

Ch’ui the draftsman
Could draw more perfect circles freehand Than with a compass.

His fingers brought forth Spontaneous forms from nowhere.
His mind
Was meanwhile free and without concern
With what he was doing.

No application was needed
His mind was perfectly simple And knew no obstacle.

So, when the shoe fits
The foot is forgotten,
When the belt fits
The belly is forgotten,
When the heart is right
"For" and "against" are forgotten.

No drives no compulsions,
No needs, no attractions:
Then your affairs
Are under control.
You are a free man.

Easy is right. Begin right
And you are easy.
Continue easy and you are right.
The right way to go easy
Is to forget the right way
And forget that the going is easy.

~ Chuang Tzu ~

(In the Dark Before Dawn, trans.
Thomas Merton)
INVITATION

Oh do you have time to linger for just a little while out of your busy and very important day for the goldfinches that have gathered in a field of thistles for a musical battle, to see who can sing the highest note, or the lowest, or the most expressive of mirth, or the most tender? Their strong, blunt beaks drink the air as they strive melodiously not for your sake and not for mine but for sheer delight and gratitude—believe us, they say, it is a serious thing just to be alive on this fresh morning in the broken world. I beg of you, do not walk by without pausing to attend to this rather ridiculous performance. It could mean something. It could mean everything. It could be what Rilke meant, when he wrote:

You must change your life.

- MARY OLIVER -
there Is a brokenness

There is a brokenness
out of which comes the unbroken, a shatteredness out of which blooms the unshatterable.

There is a sorrow beyond all grief which leads to joy and a fragility out of whose depths emerges strength.

There is a hollow space too vast for words through which we pass with each loss,

out of whose darkness we are sanctioned into being.
There is a cry deeper than all sound

whose serrated edges cut the heart as we break open to the place inside which is unbreakable and whole,
while learning to sing.
–Rashani

The Summer Day

Who made the world?
Who made the swan, and the black bear?
Who made the grasshopper?
This grasshopper, I mean—the one who has flung herself out of the grass, the one who is eating sugar out of my hand, who is moving her jaws back and forth instead of up and down—who is gazing around with her enormous and complicated eyes.
Now she lifts her pale forearms and thoroughly washes her face.
Now she snaps her wings open, and floats away.
I don’t know exactly what a prayer is.
I do know how to pay attention, how to fall down into the grass, how to kneel down in the grass, how to be idle and blessed, how to stroll through the fields, which is what I have been doing all day.
Tell me, what else should I have done?
Doesn’t everything die at last, and too soon?
Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life?

–Mary Oliver
When I Was the stream

When I was the stream, when I was the forest, when I was still the field, when I was every hoof, foot, fin, and wing, when I was the sky itself;

No one ever asked me did I have a purpose, no one ever wondered was there anything I might need . . . for there was nothing I could not love.

It was when I left all we once were that the agony began, that the fear and questions came and I wept. I wept. And tears I had never known before.

So I returned to the river. I returned to the mountains. I asked for their hand in marriage again. I begged--I begged to wed every object and creature. And when they accepted, God was ever present in my arms.

Meister Eckhart (1260-1328)

Connections

Connections are made slowly, sometimes they grow underground. You cannot always tell by looking at what is happening. More than half a tree is spread out in the soil under your feet. Penetrate quietly as the earthworm that blows no trumpet. Fight persistently as the creeper that brings down the tree. Spread like the squash plant that overruns the garden. Gnaw in the dark, and use the sun to make sugar. Weave real connections, create real nodes, build real houses. Live a life you can endure: make life that is loving. Keep tangling and interweaving and taking more in, a thicket and bramble wilderness to the outside but to us it is interconnected with rabbit runs and burrows and lairs. This is how we are going to live for a long time: not always. For every gardener knows that after the digging, after the planting, after the long season of tending and growth, the harvest comes.

Marge Piercy
A Portrait of America in Trash,

Jose Padua

I give to you a portrait of America in trash.
I give it to you with love and respect, America:

mountains of beer cans crumpled, plastic figures with fallen action, black velvet portraits of Elvis with broken frames and food stains; I give to you all the beautiful useless objects of our time built up into great muddy walls of stench, solemn monuments to steady gimmicks and confidence games, women and men with voices and no spines. Like hallelujahs falling on a parking lot's wet pavement, or tattoos of hearts on wrinkling skin, I am moving on, trying to find a way around these American mountains.

High above the fruited plain I hover; America, my lover, I give to you my rotten paradise, I bequeath to you my hog's view, I toss to you what is heaven and disposable, a gracious state of nothing that lifts us, a celebration saying that everything we know is trash.

The poor cast off plastic wrappers, paper soaked with grease and noisy metal as the rich cast off the poor like an itch; it's as easy as a blink, witty or dry like a fly; attracted to what dies, he makes his way toward the glaze of a poor man's eye. What America makes, America can throw away: we have the right, right?

I step off the plane and into the flushing river. I am petrified. I am stone. My eyes are all aquiver.
To Be of Use

The people I love the best jump into work head first without dallying in the shallows and swim off with sure strokes almost out of sight.

They seem to become natives of that element, the black sleek heads of seals bouncing like half-submerged balls. I love people who harness themselves, an ox to a heavy cart, who pull like water buffalo, with massive patience, who strain in the mud and the muck to move things forward, who do what has to be done, again and again.

I want to be with people who submerge in the task, who go into the fields to harvest and work in a row and pass the bags along, who are not parlor generals and field deserters but move in a common rhythm when the food must come in or the fire be put out.

The work of the world is common as mud. Botched, it smears the hands, crumbles to dust. But the thing worth doing well done has a shape that satisfies, clean and evident. Greek amphoras for wine or oil, Hopi vases that held corn, are put in museums, but you know they were made to be used. The pitcher cries for water to carry and a person for work that is real.

Marge Piercy

All I Cannot Save

Adreienne Rich

My heart is moved by all I cannot save
So much has been destroyed
I have to cast my lot with those, who, age after age, Perversely, with no extraordinary Power, reconstitute the world.

On Waking

I give thanks for arriving Safely in a new dawn,
For the gift of eyes
To see the world,
The gift of mind
To feel at home
In my life.
The waves of possibility Breaking on the shore of dawn,
The harvest of the past
That awaits my hunger,
And all the furtherings
This new day will bring.

John O’Donohue
Lost

David Wagoner

Stand still.
The trees ahead and bushes beside you Are not lost. Wherever you are is called Here,
And you must treat it as a powerful stranger, Must ask permission to know it and be known.
The forest breathes. Listen. It answers,
I have made this place around you,
If you leave it you may come back again, saying Here.
No two trees are the same to Raven.
No two branches are the same to Wren.
If what a tree or a bush does is lost on you,
You are surely lost. Stand still.
The forest knows Where you are.
You must let it find you.

The Larger Circle

Wendell Berry

We clasp the hands of those that go before us,
And the hands of those who come after us.
We enter the little circle of each other’s arms
And the larger circle of lovers,
Whose hands are joined in a dance
And the larger circle of all creatures Passing in and out of life
Who move also in a dance To a music so subtle and vast that no ear hears it Except in fragments.